

UNDER A BIG FOG BLANKET.

New York City and Bay Obscured by the Densest Mist for Years.

Weather Bureau Promises Relief in the Form of a Cold Wave.

The heaviest, densest fog that has obscured this city for years longed over the river and bay this morning. It was a fog such as fishermen and sailors encounter with great dread, and the utmost precautions were taken by masters of all vessels. Only such craft as were compelled to venture out to sea and the ferryboats and the small craft that ply between this city and the opposite shores left their moorings.

The fog was responsible for the delay in the arrival of vessels due to-day from foreign ports, and up to noon there was only one arrival, the steamship Bermuda, from St. Croix.

It was impossible to discern an object fifty yards ahead from the bridge over the river, and those who know the difficulty of navigation under such circumstances can appreciate the danger that attended it.

Ferryboats are usually run on half speed during a fog, but to-day speed had to be reduced to a less than half. The boats did not move more than a few feet, and people on the shore to business in this city were greatly delayed.

Among the delayed steamships expected to-day are the Helvetia, Egyptian Monarch and the Alexander Elder from London; the Niagara from Havana; the Hudson from Rotterdam; the Moravia from Hamburg; and the Colon from Colon.

Delayed trains are run at reduced speed, and the trains from suburban towns on the Harlem and central railroads made slow progress, so that the delay was all around on account of the fog.

Observer Dunn says that a fog is due to the warm weather, and that it extends all over the Atlantic Coast. He promises a decided change for the morning, due to a cold wave direct from the Northwest, where the thermometer indicates between thirty and forty degrees below zero.
